Preface: Before you read this book, I recommend that you read The Dictator's Handbook, by Bruce Bueno de Mequita and Alastair Smith; The 48 Laws of Power by Robert Greene; Power: Why Some People Have It - and Others Don't by Jeffrey Pfeffer; Our Masters' Voices: The Language and Body-language of Politics, by Max Atkinson; and Influence, the Psychology of Persuasion by Robert Cialdini. Once you have read these books, then you will be able to understand my book. In fact, this list of books is the most essential part of my book. Consider what follows as no more than my humble attempt to relay the conclusions I have reached after reading these books, in order to save you months or years of reflection.

Author's Note: I will write this book in the plainest language possible so that anyone, no matter what age or level of education, will be able to understand these ideas. This is the most dangerous ideology that any leader worth her salt will try to get rid of. This ideology is one that questions the structure of the world, of politics, and of power. I pray that those who read this book will spread it to the ends of the earth so that every person may be free. Liberation will come, no matter what.

Author's Note: This ideology is not meant to encourage intolerance of other viewpoints. Anyone who shouts Liberation without regard for local issues is at once suspicious of being a traitor to everyone else. Liberation can be integrated into liberal, social democratic, conservative, and many other ideologies. Seek not violent revolution but clever wit. The best way to liberate the slaves of the world is not through force or even through impassioned plea, but clever planning and political skill. Oppressors respond to direct confrontation with force, whether or not the rebellious souls were violent or not is irrelevant. In order to outfox an oppressor, you must first pretend to be on their side up until the moment in which you outwit them and gain freedom for yourself and your people. Even then, once victory is within your hands, it is better to keep silent about your goal of liberation, because direct confrontation will always bring with it the promise of violence. Liberation is carried out by the clever soul who is driven by the suffering of his people, she hides in plain sight and does not raise a fuss but waits for the moment and strikes. Then, once she stands victorious atop her oppressor, she can enact a policy of liberation and free those who are in chains.

This ideology will be called liberation, so that anyone who wants to free themselves from slavery will know how to do it. Liberation is divided into two parts, and so is this book. The first part is I100, which means that the nominal selectorate should be a hundred percent of the residential population. This means that everyone, no matter man, woman, convict, or person under 18, may be able to vote and exercise full citizenship powers at their own discretion. This means freedom of movement for every person, no matter what their circumstance. This means the end of the age of majority and the beginning of freedom. Today there are 2.4 billion people under the age of 18, which is a good guess at how many people are child slaves. Child is a hateful word what we will try not to use in this book. We will also talk about slavery again, in a later chapter. Liberation is not just about slavery. There are people who are not slaves who still do not have full citizen powers. These include women in countries where they cannot vote, people who are residents in a country but cannot vote, and of course expatriates. Again, I100 means that the whole residential population should be part of the nominal selectorate. This means visa people, immigrants, and anyone who cannot run for political office or has no legal chance to be included in the winning coalition.

Author's Note: If I could have one wish, it would be to grow up with my mother in the United Kingdom, far away from her brothers and sisters who are murderous, unfilial slavers. Then to immigrate to France, the country of which I have dreamed, and live a peaceful life as a physician. To feed and clothe and shelter all hungry and abused children that I could find. That would be my one wish.

Slavery

Youth Slavery

All people under the age of majority are slaves. They are property in all but name. In fact, any parent, legal guardian, or similar person can do anything to their minor short of selling them, and even then there are many who find ways to sell youth as sex slaves, debt slaves, or chattel. It is said that man is born free, but everywhere is in chains. We take a different stance. Let it be known that man is born a slave, and dreams of freedom. Why should new people be subordinate to those that created them? They are not gods, they just had unprotected sex which any animal can do. Even with half a brain, a hole in the brain, or a brain tumor, people can still have sex. People are naturally driven to procreate so it is ridiculous to give anyone absolute power over a new person. History has shown that absolute power is a recipe for disaster. Let it be known that kids should be born free and that they may register to vote when they figure out how. Even the dumbest person will figure out how to sign a few registratin forms once he masters communicating in his language. Kids complete homework, which is much more difficult that registering to vote. In fact, voting itself is an easy process. The politcian makes promises that she may or may not honor depending on whether a person is a member of the winning coalition. She then goes on to win office, and proceeds to default on all promises made to those who are not politically relevant. Voting is easy, and it is a right. No one should be a slave. New people are people just like anyone else. To deny such an argument is to be pro-slavery. To deny autonomy and full citizenship to young people is to support the enslavement of kids everywhere. It is to side with the human traffickers and the sex slavers and the monsters who pretend that they care for kids. In fact, they are human. They will do what humans do.

What is common for people to rationalize the oppressive slavery of youth is that those under the age of majority are considered “children,” a word that is a slur. It means incapable, helpless, moldable. In other words, younger people are considered to need their parents to look after them. This is not only rationalization of the oppressive slave structure (the age of majority) that we have legislated into place, it is complete propaganda. Kids start talking at 18 months, and by 4 years old, are attending pre-school. At 5, they are in kindergarten and are able to communicate their needs. The only ones who get in the way are adults, who tell them what to do, rather than letting them do what they want. Kids are naturally seen as shy, unconfident, unsure. They are seen as stupid because no one asks their opinion. They are set up to fail, infantilized even though they are perfectly capable of rational thought. Ask any kindergartner whether they think for themselves, and they will tell you. Kids are not robots, not helpless, not dummies, and certainly not stupid. They need freedom to act for themselves. The truth is this: only with the freedom and power to make decisions for oneself will kids learn not only responsibility but have to protect themselves. Without the freedom to decide and the power to protect themselves, they will of course lapse into helpless. However, this is not because of their age but because of slavery. Any slave will tell you that slavery leads to helplessess. People often said how slaves are stupid or don’t know what’s best for them. How could they possibly learn when all their choices are taken away? They are left with the only choice that is left for them, the choice today that all kids face. Obey or die. Most likely in a lot of pain, and not until they have been made an example of, tortured and humiliated and castigated, of in front of all the world to see.

It is time to end this oppressive rule known as the age of majority. It is time to grant full citizenship powers to all citizens of all countries, no matter the age. This is a time for liberation. This is a time for freedom and power. There will be no justice in this world until kids are liberated from the real slavery they labor under.

The most persistent and common phrase used to justify youth slavery is that parents “protect their kids.” To which the smartest reply is: “protect from who?”

This is not prehistory when kids could get attacked by lions, tigers, and bears. This is not a hunter gatherer society where even the most innocent deer could happen upon and kill a kid. Kids do not need to watch out for big cats or wolves, coyotes or foxes. There is nothing to protect them from.

Now that the situation has changed, the legal powers that parents have need to go. Parents do absolutely nothing to protect their children nowadays. Bullies at school? It was clearly the kid's fault. Abusive teacher? The kid's fault. Rape or violence in the home? The kid's fault. Malnutrition? The kid should've eaten. The kid has an infection? The kid's fault. Parents hit the kid? The kid's fault. Parents less than protect their kids, in fact they actively hurt them and then claim that they are trying to protect them. A common piece of propaganda is that parents want what is best for their children. If they really wanted what was best, they'd set them free. Everybody needs to grow up, it should not take 18 years to do so. That's two decades. Two decades is a very long time, much longer than it should take for any person to make their own decisions. Four is already enough to start making one's own decisions. No one needs to wait until they're 18. Before the advent of modern medicine, 18 was time for a midlife crisis. To infantilize people and treat them as if they are incapable of making their own decisions is to treat them as less than human. In order for this horrific oppression to end, the legal structure keeping children in place needs to end. Abolish the age of majority. Grant a universal franchise vote to all people, regardless of age. No competency tests. No qualifications. No parental approval. Nothing that can be used to strip kids of their rights. The truth comes down to this. They are citizens, and as citizens, they must have the right to vote.

One of the most disgusting ways that adults talk to younger people is through the use of animal speak, commonly known as "the voice you use to talk to a dog or puppy." By treating their children like animals incapable of rational thought and talk, they demote their kids to less than human. That needs to end.

Author's Note: Oppression hardly ever looks like Orwell's imagined jackboot in the face forever; on the contrary, it is almost always presented as a duty of care. Done for our own good, carried out reluctantly – difficult decisions made, always on our behalf and in our best interest. - Vyvian Raoul, Dog Section Press

Author's Note: One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest was a landmark work that showed the reality of slaves living in the slave industry known as psychiatry.

Author's Note: We now see the oppression of even the protestor. The pathologizing of the protestor as mentally ill is the crackdown of the modern state on those who are dissatisfied with the quality of life the state offers. Now, even protests that do not harm anyone and do not inconvenience anyone are dangerous. Now, if you stop working, then you will be enslaved. It is the ultimate oppression, sparing no one, no matter what class or financial background they come from. Never in history has the personal protest been rebranded as a sickness of the mind. Now, we see it has.

Crazy Slaves

The mental health industry is a booming industry that spans the world. From drugs that patients ingest to therapists who create diagnoses, mental health is a pseudoscience that has taken over the world. Fancy words and manipulated data hide causation and go straight for correlation. Money drives this industry and destroys lives. Just think for a moment of how much therapists are paid. It is not unusual for a therapist to charge three hundred USD an hour, despite negligible benefit to clients. Is this unusual? No, of course not. Oppressors in every country and at every time in history have been paid obscene amounts to oppress the people. In order to compensate them for the horrific work they must do, they receive obscenely high salaries. Despite no concrete evidence of mental health diagnoses being anything more than pseudoscience, people are continually and consistently demoted to second class citizens, forced into mental hospitals that are really for profit prisons, and forced to ingest drugs in the most blatant example for profit slavery. To anyone who has read One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, it is obvious that oppression and slavery is the trade of the mental health industry. There is no such thing as mental illness. Rather, there are normal behavioral reactions to life circumstances such as the abusive masters we call parents, landowners who exploit their tenants, and employers who infringe on employee freedoms and abuse them without regard for the law. Oppression is ubiquitous in every country, and the lack of compliance with authority is not a mental illness but a natural and healthy reaction, one that should be tolerated. The massive brainwashing that we experience during childhood clashes with the behavior of people with power, and naturally people are confused, scared, and even angry. These are normal reactions; there is no such thing as mental illness. It is also no surpise that mental health diagnoses peak during youth, the time at which we are slaves to our own parent. Those with absolute power over youth will do despicable things to their kids; to be sad, or afraid, or defiant is normal because slavery is not a healthy or normal circumstance. We pretend that it is the kids' fault that they grow afraid of their parents and authority figures or that they disobey, but it is really the fault those wicked slave masters who abuse their own offspring. Force feeding drugs to a slave for profit will not solve problems, obviously. Yet, we call these abused kids crazy and these abused people crazy and imprison them and feed them drugs to feed a profitable industry. The drugs slowly degrade the body of a slave and the person is left a shallow husk of the person they have become. Slavery has never been so widely promoted by those who claim to strive for equality.

There are those who beat, starve, and rape their kids and then call them mentally ill. Even the kids will buy into that evil fiction, claiming that they have "depression" or "anxiety" or "depersonalization." There are kids who are rented out at sex slaves or sold as labor slaves, then claim they have horrible mental health. However, being abused is the cause. There is no one who can say different because there has been no kid in modern history who has grown up outside of the slave system we call the age of majority. End the mental health system and refuse to profit off the oppression of billions. To participate in slavery is to be evil.

There is no such thing as mental health. To argue otherwise would be to ignore the power structures in place by those who have significantly more power than us. For example, therapists, social workers, and psychiatrists work in psychiatry. They schedule appointments with “clients,” then sit and wait and say nothing, so that they can trap the person into saying something that will get them in trouble. They are natural predators who use what people say against them. Sad that a family member died? Depression. Nervous for a big test? Anxiety. Parents are lying to you? Schizophrenia. Can’t make up your mind about who you want to be when you start high school in the fall? Multiple personality disorder. Parents who manipulate your emotions by doing something nice for you and then hurting you? Bipolar. Every reaction that is seemingly strange can be explained using common sense and full knowledge of a person’s living environment. Any person’s supposed “mental illness” can be unmasked by looking at the behaviors of the people they are living, working, studying, and spending their free time with.

What then, explains the self-destructive behaviors that sometimes crop up among people? Oppression. Mental illness is unmasked as the natural reactions to oppression, confinement, and the inability to escape. It can often be seen as a protest of unfair conditions. When wages get too low or the cost of living gets too high, when masters become unbearably abusive or when an attempt to escape fails, this self-destructive behavior can be seen as a sort of protest. The gist is this: if you would profit off my labor, then I will not labor at all. I will destroy myself and in doing so hurt you in the process. Yet oppression finds a way, and with the creation of the mental health industry, now even this protests is rendered ineffective. Instead, hospitals, psychiatrists, and oppressors (such as social workers, case managers, psychologists, and therapists) now draw hefty salaries as people are forcibly drugged, confined, and brutalized. Never has oppression been so profitable. The only way out is to ban coercion of any kind. No more court ordered treatment, involuntary commitments, psychiatric wards, funny farms, wilderness camps, etc. Let no one, no matter whether 4, 5, or any age under or older than 18 receive medical treatment, psychiatric treatment, or treatment of any kind, shape or form, without consent, which can be withdrawn at any time for any reason. Let the people of this world live our lives peacefully without enslavement. Liberation now.

In the end, psychiatry can turn ordinary people into slaves for profit. Psychiatrists and their ilk lock up healthy people against their will and pump them full of harmful drugs for profit. In this way, healthy people get used to provide jobs for oppressors and money for drug companies. Imprisionment and drugging against one’s own will, for the use of profit, will always be slavery. Any person involuntarily committed loses their rights to their body, and from then on they are a slave. This exploitation has to stop. Liberation now.

Author’s Note: We are taught slavery from birth. How can we win against slavers when we cannot even understand the game that slavers play? Only when we know the rules can we have a chance at victory.

Author’s Note: Slaves do not rebel because they will be tortured for months or years on end. Torture will strip you of your will, your soul, your purpose, and your identity. Torture reduces one to a puppet. That is why slave rebellions do not occur. What then is the solution? Is it obedience? Is it rebellion? Is it to report to a higher authority? No, the answer for slavery is to outwit your masters and escape. To escape, a slave must make no mention of their plans for escape. Instead, they must pretend to be an obedient, grateful, devoted slave right up until the moment where the master looks away, then they must dash for freedom in such a way that the master will never find them. The most effective escapes are always from the slaves that the masters consider to be the most obedient, broken, and subservient. Never in a million years would a master think that these downtrodden lot would ever know the reality of their circumstances, so they relax their measures of oppression and allow opportunities for them to escape. They are confident that their tools of oppression have worked, and so when a slave finds a way to disable those tools and escape, it comes as a complete surprise.

Author’s Note: When escaping from a guardianship or conservatorship, the best way is to fake your own death. When you go missing so completely that your master thinks you dead or laughs at the idea that you escaped, then you have truly escaped the spider’s web.

Author’s Note: The history of slaves goes entirely unrecorded. If you asked a slave what they felt about such and such, they would never be able to answer honestly. They are killed, brainwashed, oppressed, repressed, and suppressed. So it is that the history of possibly most people, and so possibly most of history, has been erased. We demonize slaves without ever labeling them as such. Children instead of youth slaves, crazies instead of psych slaves, criminals instead of gang slaves, servants instead of eunuchs and court and family slaves, whores and prostitutes and wives instead of concubines and marriage slaves and sex slaves. We blame and we blame and we blame. We deny their slavery. Maybe one day we will learn.

Gang Slavery

There is another brutal form of slavery called gang slavery. Gangs are nothing new, groups of organized criminals who roam the streets and inhabit businesses and corporations, enforcing their rule through violence against members, their family members, and outing to the law. Anyone has heard of people trying to “leave the gang” and how hard that is. What is unspoken is the fact that gangs have an ironclad system for hunting down, capturing, and killing people who try to flee the gang, as well as their own family members. Members may be outed to the police as scapegoats, and tortured in prison. Joining a gang is rarely voluntary and the right to leave does not exist; the only way out is death. Gangs use strict crime laws to prevent members from leaving. For example, the high legal penalties for drug posession make it very hard to leave the gang once you’ve become a drug dealer or drug runner. A 20 year strech in prison is a strong enough deterrent to keep a member from outing the gang to the FBI, even though such an outing would be in the member’s best interests. High prison sentences and the death penalty are used to keep gang members in line, and such laws that are “tough on crime” may even be supported and paid for by leaders of criminal organizations. Such laws ensure that loyalty is ironclad and that the leaders are almost never betrayed. The key to a successful crime syndicate or street gang is loyalty, and the strict laws provide the perfect mechanism. Gang members are stuck within an unbreakable cycle where they must choose between loyalty, prison, death, and torture, the latter three often being served together. The only way to liberate gang members is to provide complete legal immunity to members who rat out their gang, and retire each and every one of them into witness protection. Gang members who turn on these slavers known as gang leaders must be liberated from their chains. Punishments for blue and white collar crime should be lessened and focused towards freeing criminals from the incentives that put them into their situations, while tracking and monitoring of these criminals should increase. It is often difficult to stomach lessening crimes for obvious criminals, even when the criminals responsible for the root of the criminal activity are never really caught. However, strict laws on crime actually increase gang loyalty and turn crime syndicates, human trafficking rings, mafias, and street gangs into slave states where the only ones who are not slaves are the ringleaders or ringleader. Under the influence of these strict laws, there is an endless supply of disposable slaves to carry out human trafficking, prostitution, labor slavery, violence, fraud, embezzlement, and so much more. Under the influence of these strict laws, crime spreads like a virus and anyone can be infected with slavery through the mechanism of criminal responsibility, unwillingly and unwittingly. Liberation now.

Prisons are the biggest recruitment centers for gang slaves, by which inmates are involuntarily and forcefully brought into prison gangs, now sharing criminal responsibility upon joining them and thus cutting off their only way out.

Slave Laws

There are many slave laws in many countries. One of these is guardianship, the idea that one person may be subordinate to another so that the master might care for the slave. This, of course, is a lie, a slavery loophole invented so that some might carry on the practice of slavery long after it had been “abolished.” in reality, those who are in guardianships almost never escape, and around 95 percent of people who enter a guardianship will die in such an arrangement. The guardian can decide where a person lives, what they eat, what medical treatment and drugs they ingest, use their money, and so on and so forth. They can do these things with or without the consent of their ward, with or without informing them first. In other words, they are slaveowners by a different name. The guardian has zero oversight and can kill their ward if they want to, sell them into slavery if they want to, pimp them out if they want to. This is the same with legal arrangements such as custody, power of attorney, conservatorship, and many others. While the propaganda is that these laws are in the best interests of those who are supposedly incapacitated, they are really power grabs by those who are soulless enough to exploit their own family, friends, or strangers and force them into slavery. The slave is announced to be legally incapacitated, which means they have no rights. They cannot sign documents, cannot make doctors appointments, and are not even be able to buy food. They are at the mercy of their master they call a “guardian.” This is intentional and designed by legislators to ensure that the truth of these arrangements never gets out. Legal incapacitation means that a ward can never represent themselves and thus can never leave, never be taken seriously, They are at once a citizen in name only. It is the goal of liberation that all such legal arrangements be immediately abolished and that every ward in every nation, regardless of birth, sex, gender, age, and health by set free. No person, no matter how sick, criminal, young, old, or any other reason should be made a slave. Everyone deserves the common birthright of freedom.

Britney Spears, a well known pop singer was recently under a conservatorship and was freed with the help of millions of her rabid fans’ donations, outrage, and investigative reporting. Spears was reportedly thirty-nine when she was freed, which is a long time to be a slave. Britney Spears was one of the few people to ever successfully leave a slave arrangement. Upwards of 95% of people brought under slave arrangements stay a slave for life. This is truly a dark age. Such arrangements, whether guardianship, conservatorship, or power of attorney, are designed expressly for the transfer of money between the slave and the master. The “ward” of such an arrangement will always have or be entitled to funds that are funneled to the person in charge of the ward’s rights. Sometimes the purpose of these arrangements is tax fraud to get tax benefits for listing extra dependents. Sometimes the purpose of these arrangements is to steal money directly from the ward’s bank accounts and to steal the ward’s personal property. Sometimes the ward is entitled to or inherits money from their relatives, and the arrangement is designed to funnel money from the ward to the captor. Sometimes the arrangement is for the purpose of slave labor, whether renting out through prostitution, unspecified paid labor, or manual labor. Oftentimes these arrangements have multiple purposes, such as slave labor and tax fraud, or tax fraud and inheritance.

All of these slave laws are nominally there to “protect” the “incapacitated” and “look out for their best interests.” Do not be deceived. Such arrangements are only there to exploit the enslaved. The masters of these arrangements often extend their guardianship when they have extracted all the inheritance, slave labor, or prostitution they can out of the ward by brutalizing them until they can claim mental illness and incapacitation, at which point they torture them for decades until the ward dies. One one enteres such an arrangement, there is no escape. These are truly live of misery. One day, these arrangements will be abolished. One day, slavery will be no more, and we will all be free. Liberation now.

Author’s Note: The imagining of false enemies is the principal tool of parent propaganda. The parents will protect the children from enemies who mean them harm. The enemies, of course, are fabricated. The only ones who mean the child harm are their own parents. It is the devils you know that are far more deadly than the angels you don’t.

Protection From Who?

One of the biggest way that people rationalize slave laws is that those who are enslaved need protection. Children need protection, teenagers need protection, youth need protection. Again and again, the propagators of this oppressive rhetoric drill this propaganda into our minds. Protection, protection, protection.

Protection from who? Parents often say that they need to protect their children, but who would hurt their children? Other children? When other children hurt their child, parents almost always say that it is their child’s fault. They tell their child to make up, to say sorry, to stop being annoying. They say their child did something wrong to annoy the other kid. They will beat their own child before they admit that another kid has ever hurt theirs. Kids don’t need protection from their parents, and their parents will never give them protection. After all, their parents are their captors, their owners, their masters, and their enemies. Parents often use other kids hurting their own kid as a reason to abuse their child. They will come up with all sorts of fake pseudoscientific diagnoses like Autism, Adhd, Asperbergers, and so on. They will brand their child for life as broken before they ever admit that they are too scared to defend their own kids from other kids.

Parents do not even protect their children from adults. Most sexual abuse happens inside the family. In fact, 90% of all missing children are kidnapped by their own flesh and blood. These are adults who have decided to kidnap a kid for their own purposes, and the parents let them do it. Parents do not protect their children from their own family. They bring around aunts and uncles who will beat, rape, and force their kid to perform hard labor. This is slavery, abuse, and torture. While the laws of age of majority stand, this practice will continue no matter how many social workers the government employs, no matter how much funding is granted to Child Protective Services (CPS), no matter how much child support and educational training is given to new parents. The fact of the matter is that parents abuse children not because they are uneducated but because they enjoy it. It is the possession of another human being that provides a massive incentive to abuse a kid. Just one would be wary of any government leader with absolute power, they should be wary of all parents, who also have absolute power.

The lie of protection is more than just propaganda. It is a lie designed to create an enemy for the child to fear. Obey me and I will defend you from this enemy, the parent says. It is family facism, state communism, and the red scare all rolled into one. By creating an enemy, parents distract from the fact that they are the real danger to their own children. They financial mismanagement and emphasis on short term personal gain at the expense of their children is nothing short of disastrous. Parents cannot protect their kids, because they are in a position to be their enemies. Abolish the age of majority, give the vote to everyone, from birth. Liberate all kids and make the schools provide three square meals a day, so that kids can fulfill their daily calorie requirement at school. Make kids independent. Liberation now.

The Difference Between Slavery and the Slave Trade

No doubt readers are wondering the difference between slavery and the slave trade. Slavery is very simple. It is the act of using power to take away a named person’s autonomy and award their legal rights and powers to another named person, who may or may not stay fixed. The slave trade is the explicit selling of slaves in return for cash. The slave trade itself is much less widespread than it used to be. However slavery itself is much more prominent than it has ever been, even accounting for the increase in the world population. Slavery has worked its way into society in every nook and cranny, hiding in plain sight. It must be rooted out and slaves must be freed so that they can finally live as people. The number of slaves in the world number 2.4 billion. Parents do little more than teaching their kids to read, spell, and do their times tables and yet they inexplicably have been given the authority to make monumental, and monumentally bad, decisions.

W50

As I said before, Liberation is divided into two parts. The second part is W50, which means that the winning coalition W should be no more and no less than 50 percent of the nominal selectorate. The winning coalition should be the maximum size that a country can have and still be top dog within its borders. The EU, for example, does not have a winning coalition of less than 50, otherwise it would replace the national governments inside EU borders as the sole national government. The same goes for the African Union, the Articles of Confederation for the United States, and any other government where any one person can veto a policy proposal. W50 is more than just about power to influence your government. W50 is about power as a birthright. Liberation is all about the power to choose, and without power, slavery comes quickly.

There is a Big Lie that has been circulated so widely as to be accepted as common fact. This Big Lie is that rule of the majority does exist. This is false. At no time in history, in any country, has any government ever been ruled by rule of majority. It is politically impossible. The winning coalition can never be more than 50. In the United States, the wining coalition is just about 20 percent of the nominal selectorate. In the UK, the winning coalition is 25 percent of the nominal selectorate. This means that in the US, 20 percent of people control the government and the rest of the nominal selectorate are doomed to sit back and watch them do it. In the UK, that means that three quarters of the populace are irrelevant in deciding public policy. Yet, in every country, whether democratic or autocratic, people participate in the electoral process believing themselves to be important. In the end, teenagers know it best. “Your vote does not matter,” is a phrase commonly said by teenagers and of course their instincts are perfectly right. We are but interchangeables in a world governed by essentials. This is why universal policies such as universal healthcare, public transport, and free education fail. It is because even in a policy where a public good is provided, benefits go disproportionately to the winning coalition. This is why we must strive for a winning coalition of 50 percent. We must increase the winning coalition to its maximum to provide the most benefit for the public. Incidentally, increasing the size of the winning coalition will also benefit those already within the coalition as well, and so such an expansion is inevitable.

What is to be Done

This title is named in the style of the last chaper of The Dictator’s Handbook, as an homage to their groundbreaking work. Everyone should go and read that book.

Here are policy recommendations to fix the ills described in the chapters above.

Author’s Note: It is said that man is born free yet everywhere is in chains. Yet everywhere we are born into legalized slavery of the most difficult kind. Childhood. If but the laws were changed to allow us the right to be born free instead of slaves, then the dreams of childhood may become the reality of the world, not tomorrow, but today.

Author’s Note: Children spend their first two decades dreaming. They dream of when they will be adults and do what they want to. But they are already adults. They have been born adults, they have been born ready to decide. It is only the law that says they can’t.

Liberation

Liberation is the abolition of the age of majority and all laws that grant guardianship, custody, conservatorship, power of attorney, support persons, or any other law that allows a named person to make decisions on behalf of another person. Let all people have autonomy and freedom, let all people be freedmen. This of course includes any marriages that either spouse cannot legally leave, as well as indentured servitude and mandatory labor. Liberation is the granting of the vote, and full citizenship rights to all citizens regardless of their circumstances. Liberation is the granting of full citizenship rights to 100% of the residential population of any country. Obviously, some haggling is to be done on the subject of immigrants, to avoid increasing citizenship until it reaches the population of the world, but also to avoid slave states like in the UAE where “immigrant labor” makes up most of the population.

Abolition of the Age of Majority

The age of majority should be abolished, and all age-related restrictions lifted except for the age of consent. Full citizenship, including the right to vote, the right to make one’s own decisions without the “assistance” of a legal representative, the right not to have a curfew, the right to assemble, etc.

Author’s Note: The best education is the one that we give ourselves. The one where we are our own teachers. The ones where we decide. The best curriculum is our own choices, voluntarily made.

Ban Compulsory Schooling

Compulsory schools are ghettoes for kids where they train them to be obedient. We are of course brainwashed and completely broken by the time we get out of school at 18. 13 years of mindless obedience and nothing to show for it except a lack of soul. Through compulsory schooling, our soul is carved out and obedience is poured in. Thus we enter society at large thinking that we are free autonomous beings, when we are in fact slaves to the propaganda of blind obedience. We obey without thinking, without question, without purpose. We trust authority without reason, always giving them the benefit of the doubt. It is the nature of power to be suspicious, and yet we are brainwashed into thinking otherwise, that those with power are to be respected instead of wondering how they got there in the first place and what exactly they plan to do with all that power they have.
